

GLOBAL PERSPECTIVES ON LEGAL HISTORY

A Max Planck Institute for Legal History and Legal Theory
Open Access Publication Series

Constitutional language emerged out of the interaction of legal theory, political philosophy, and historical narratives. By analyzing the concepts of constitution and arbitrariness, this book explores the logic behind this discourse, examining the transformation of law from arbitrium to the »legicentric« ideal, the history of literary imaginaries constructed in 19th-century Argentina, and the conceptual history underlying recent political and legal historiography, which criticize the traditional narrative of constitutionalism.

Agustín E. Casagrande is Professor of Legal Sociology in the Law Faculty of UNLP and Professor of the History of Western Law in the School of Humanities of UNSAM. He holds a Doctorate in Social Sciences from UNLP and was a post-doctoral fellow at the Excellence Cluster »Normative Ordnungen« at Goethe-Universität Frankfurt (2018–2019).
